The Columbia River—Oregon and its Position

LETTER FROM W. S. LADD TO THE PRINCIPAL PAPERS OF PHILADELPHIA

PORTLAND Oregon, July 21 1865.

When an enthusiastic Oregonian told me the Columbia river was the largest of the continent, and watered a wider section of country than any other, I thought of the St. Lawrence and the Mississippi, and I smiled with mild incredulity. But until your map and I trace its course into the heart of this northwestern interior through the Cascade Mountains back into the great basin between them and the Rocky Mountains, and then by its main branches stretching up north and winding out through all of British Columbia, and south and west into Utah and Nevada, the home of the Blue Mountains, nothing with its fingers all the west or north of the great desert basin and west of the Rocky Mountains. Then sail with me up and down its mile-wide, half-mile sweep of majestic current at the distance of 140 miles at sea its mouth, see what steamboats already navigate its waters and the points to which they reach, and listen to the wide plans of the navigators for the not far-off most distant upper waters in British Columbia and Idaho—mapping the very vitals of British dominion in the North west, and practically tapping the Pacific railroad as it comes west at built links for the benefit of Portland and Oregon—do all this and we will make our bow together to the Oregonians and their great river. Only most full surveys can determine the literal correctness of their claims to superior vastness. The Columbia with its chief division the Snake, may be anywhere from 1200 to 2000 miles in length. But that it ranks among the three or four great rivers of the world and that it is the key to vast political and commercial questions and interests giving to its line the elements of a powerful rivalry to the great central commercial route of our continent, of which San Francisco is the Pacific terminus—no one who examines its position and extent and witnesses the various capacity of the territory it waters can for a moment doubt.

As yet however the Columbia is not known abroad for the rare beauty and majesty of the scenery developed by its passage through the great Andean range of Western America. Alone of all the rivers of the West has it broken these eastern barriers, and the theater of the conquering conflict offers no might naturally be supposed many an unusual feature of nature. River and rock have striven together wrestling in close and doubtful embrace—sometimes one gaining seemingly, again the other but finally the subtler and more seductive element worrying its rival out, and gaining the western sunshine broken and scarred and foaming with hot sweat, but proudly victorious and forcing the with drawing armies of its opponent to hold up eternal monuments of its triumph. To witness these scenes has been the main purpose and chief pleasure of a two days' excursion up the stream from Portland. Starting at early morning on a steamboat as capacious and comfortable as the best of those on eastern rivers and with a company of the leading citizens of Oregon, we soon turned out of the Willamette (12 miles), and steamed up the broad, deep current of the Columbia. Near at hand was Vancouver, a famous spot in this valley, first as a leading station of the Hudson Bay company for many years, and since and now as the chief military station of the United States in the interior Northwest. Here many of our prominent military men have served apprenticeship—Grant, Hooker, McClellan and Ingles among them. They are all well remembered in the days of their captaincies here by the old inhabitants. Grant was the same quiet, close-mouthed man then as now. His notorious weakness was whisky-drinking, and his chief achievement the planting of potatoes on a large scale on the government reservation. The present arrangement of the quarters and offices of the post was made under Col. Ingles's administration and is both generous and tasteful. It is evidently both a favorite and comfortable military post and continues to be, as it long has been, one of the "soft places" in the army on this coast.

Fifty miles of steaming up through heavily wooded banks brought us to the foothills of the Cascade Mountains, and soon we were up in the charmed ground. High walls of basaltic rock rose slowly on either side huge boulders thrown off in the convulsion of water with mountain, the lower down the valley, or stand out in the stream—one so large, rising in rough egg shape some thousand feet up into the air, as to become a conspicuous and memorable element in the landscape. The river gets too fast here, at the Cascades, as they are called, for further progress by boat we change to a railway of five miles along rock and river, at the end of which we come to navigable waters again and find to our surprise, another large and equally luxurious steamer. During these five miles of the Cascades, the river makes a descent of 40 feet, half of it in one mile, but it takes the form of rough and rocky rapids and not of one distinct, measurable fall. The second boat took us from the Upper Cascades to the Dalles 45 miles, all the way through the mountains. The waters narrow and run swift and harsh, the rocks grow higher and sharper and their architecture by fire and water assumes noble and massive forms. The dark, basaltic strata lie along in even layers seemed as in the walls of human structure; then they change to upright form, and run up in well rounded columns, one after another, one above another. Often in rich similitude to ruined castles of the Rhine, more frequently fashions and forms, too massive, too majestic, too unique for human ambition and art to aspire to. Where the clear rock retires and sloping sides invite verdure springs strong, and forests, as thick and high as in the valleys, fill the landscape.

At The Dalles has the second town in Oregon, bearing the name of the Dalles, and holding a population of 2,500. It is the entrepot for the scattered mines in eastern Oregon, for we are now on the eastern slope of the mountains, and very much also for the mines in Idaho and Owyhee. The miners come in here to winter, send their earnings in here and buy here many of their supplies. Two millions dollars in gold dust came in here from eastern Oregon and Idaho in the single month of June last. The town is ambitious of that unnecessary adjunct, a mint, and the Oregon politicians have even wheedled Congress out of a preliminary appropriation for one.

The Dalles marks another interruption to the navigation of the river and another railway portage of fifteen miles is in use. The entire water of the Columbia is compressed for a short distance into a space only 100 feet wide. Through this it pours with a rapidity and a depth that give majestic fearful intensity to its motion, which interfering rocks occasionally throw the stream into rich masses of foam. Through these second rapids of fifteen miles, the rock scenery at first rises still higher and sharper and then fast lames the mountains begin to slink away and to lose their trees, the familiar barrenness of the great interior basin reappears, and the only beauty of the hills is their highly varied forms often repeated and their only utility pasturage for sheep and horses and cattle. The fifteen miles of railway which with the lower portage of five miles are built as permanently and served as thoroughly with the best of locomotives and cars as any railroads in the country landed us on still an other large and luxurious steamboat—and still the wonder grew—built way up here beyond the mountains, but with every appointment of comfort and luxury that are found in the best of river craft—large state rooms, fine and wide cabins, cars us and well served meals. From this point (Celilo) there is uninterrupted navigation, and daily or tri-weekly steamers running to Umatilla 8 miles, Wallula 111 miles on the White Bluffs 160 miles farther up the stream. For six months in the year boats can and do run way on to Lewiston on the Snake river branch of the Columbia, which is 270 miles beyond Celilo or 400 miles from the mouth of the Columbia as White Bluffs, the head of navigation on the main river, is 100 miles from the mouth.

We spent the night on the boat at Celilo and during the evening the most of the party went back by rail to The Dalles for spectacles to the people from Speaker Colfax and Gov. Brown of the boat hits of fun on our journey was improvised on their return late in the night. Those who had remained on the boat suddenly emerged from their state rooms wrapped in the drapery in which they had laid themselves down to sleep, and proceeded to give formal welcome to the entering party. Mr. Richardson addressed the speaker in an amusing travesty of some familiar points in his own speeches. Mr. Colfax soared the joke and replied a la Richardson with equal effectiveness. The whole scene and performance was picturesque and amusing in the highest degree and the cabin resounded with boisterous laughter from all sides.

The next morning we proceeded thirty or forty miles still further up the river, till we had got beyond all traces of the collision of the stream with the mountain and the scenery grew common and tame. Then we turned back, having reached a point 260 miles above the mouth of the river and retraced our passage through the same scenes, renewing our worship and our wonder before the strange and beautiful effects produced by this piercing of these eternal hills by the majestic river of the West. As a whole, I know no like scenery so grand, so beautiful. It has much of the distinguishing elements of the Hudson in its Palisades, of the Rhine in its embattled precipitous and irregularly shaped sides, and of the Upper Mississippi in its ever changing cliffs. Each of these holds a beauty that is not here, but the Columbia aggregates more than any one the elements of impressiveness, of picturesque majesty of wonder waking, powerful nature. I was more enthusiastic over each of these rivers, I saw them with younger and less weary eyes but this convinces my intellect of its superiority. There is, however, a general uniformity in its characteristics, one five miles reports another; and once seen, you are indifferent as to a second sight—before next year, or unless with the accompaniment of new and beloved eyes.

A distinguishing feature in the landscape of this ride up the Columbia—apart from it, yet bounding it, shadowing it, yet enkindling it with highest majesty and beauty—is Mount Hood. This is the great snow peak of Oregon, its Shasta, its Rainier, its Mt Blanc. Lying off twenty or thirty miles south of the river, in its passage through the mountains, it towers high above all its fellows and is seen, now through clear gorges, and again at the end of apparent long plains, leading up to it from the river. Most magnificent views of it are obtained through nearly all the sail up and down from Portland. That which Bierstadt has chosen for its perpetuation on canvass, and which is thus familiar to Eastern eyes, is the most complete and impressive, and is recognized upon the steamboat. In it, the mountain seems to rise, apart, out from an upward-going plain, snow-covered from base to summit, oppressive in its majesty, beautiful in form, angelic in its whiteness—the union of all that is great and pure and impressive. Various heights are claimed for Hood, from 13,000 to 18,500 feet; but it is not at all likely that it exceeds 15,000 feet. There is the best of reason to believe that the famous high peaks of the Pacific States have been popularly over-estimated; there are many undisputably from 12,000 to 14,000 feet high, but the highest mountain on the coast is believed to have been one measured last year in southern California and rising to a height of about 16,000 feet. Adding this crowning ornament to the scenery of the Columbia river, and it is probably just to say of it that this excursion offers more of natural beauty and wonder to interest and excite the traveler than any other single expedition or spot which the Pacific coast presents, except the Yosemite valley. That must stand first, unrivaled, and unapproachable. But to this I give the second place.

The navigation of the Columbia river is now in the hands of a strong and energetic company, who not only have the capacity to improve all its present opportunities, but the foresight to seek out and create new ones. They are inland making new paths in the wilderness, and show more comprehension of the situation and purpose to develope it than any set of men I have yet met on the Pacific coast. Organized in 1861, with property worth $175,000, they have now, with eighteen or twenty first-class steamboats, the two railroads around the Cascades and the Dalles, and their appurtenants, warehouses at all the principal towns on the river, including one 925 feet long at Celilo and real estate in preparation for future growth a total property of nearly two million dollars, all earned from their business. Besides this great increase of wealth from their own enterprise, they paid to themselves in dividends $132,750. By wagon roads from the Dalles, from Umatilla, and from Wallula, the river and their boats have formed and still form the cheapest and quickest route to the rich mines of Boise and Owyhee in Idaho, as well as to those in eastern Oregon. Boise City is 260 miles from Umatilla and Owyhee 290 miles. The roads from the other points are longer and poorer. So large have been the travel and trade in this direction in the last few years that the Oregon Steam Navigation Company has carried to the upper Columbia 60,320 tons in the last four years, beginning 6,000 tons in 1862 and rising to nearly 22,000 tons in 1864. In the same time, their boats have carried up and down on the river nearly 100,000 passengers, increasing from 10,000 in 1861 to 36,000 in 1864.

California has at last aroused herself to the importance of securing this trade, if possible, for herself, and is opening shorter wagon routes to Idaho by way of Chico and Red Bluff, in the upper Sacramento valley, and through Nevada and the Humboldt valley; but the Oregon people are still likely to keep a large if not the larger share of the traffic by reason of the popularity of their route, and the great proportion of it accomplished by the cheaper safer and pleasanter means of water and steam. The Oregon navigation company are also busy with plans for improving their own route. By opening a road 114 miles long, across a wide bend of unnavigable reaches of the Snake river from Wallula to the mouth of the Powder river, they will again find the Snake river navigable for 150 to 200 miles further up its course, or into the very heart of the Owyhee and Boise gold basins, and on beyond towards Utah. Then from this new head of navigation on the Snake river, to Salt Lake, is but 150 or 150 miles more, so that with wagon roads of less than 100 miles, steam navigation may soon be secured all the way from Salt Lake to the Pacific ocean in Oregon. Substitute for these wagon roads a railway, or leaving out the navigation of the upper Snake, and building a railroad 550 miles across from Salt Lake through the gold regions of Idaho to Wallula, whence is uninterrupted navigation up the Columbia, and the Pacific coast is reached by steam through Oregon with at least two thirds the railroad building required for the central route into San Francisco. The line for this suggested road is easy, crossing the Blue mountains in eastern Oregon by a very favorable pass, and avoiding by the Columbia river the great work of surmounting the Sierra Nevadas. These are important, pregnant suggestions. The Oregon navigation company is impressed with their significance and will next spring construct a steamboat on the upper Snake for testing the practicability of that point in the programme. They mean at least to hold their superiority in the commerce of Idaho and if the Central Pacific railway interest does not push in its work with alacrity the despised Oregonians may yet show their heels to their Californian neighbors in the matter of the quickest and cheapest route for travel and freight from the Rocky mountains to the coast.

So at the north into the heart of British Columbia the Oregon steamboat company are working out a notable plan for extending their operations. By building a wagon portage of 150 miles north from White Bluffs the present head of navigation on the main stream of the Columbia, cutting off a wide and impassable angle of the river, the stream is again struck at a navigable point close to the 49th parallel and steamers can be run from there 160 to 200 miles north through the series of lakes into which the river widens in that region, away up to the 52d and 53d parallels, where steamboats were never heard of or thought of and into the new and famous gold region of British Columbia, the Cariboo country. The steamboat company are already building a steamer in this double upper Columbia, and next season will probably be enabled to inaugurate this capital idea and illustration of their enterprise. Now the Cariboo mines are only reached by way of Victoria, Fraser river and 400 to 500 miles of rough land travel. This now route will bring them into quick and cheap communication with American markets and American impulses at Portland.

In this and other ways Oregon and its people make a pleasant and promising impression upon us. They look many of the advantages of their neighbors below, their agriculture is less varied, but it is more sure, mining has not poured such irregular and intoxicating wealth into their laps they need as well, a more thorough farming and a more varied industry they need, also as well intelligent patient labor and capital but they build but what they have got more slowly and more wisely than the Californians, they have less severe reaction from hot and unhealthy growth to encounter, less to unlearn, and they seem sure not of organizing the first State on the Pacific coast, indeed, but of a steadily prosperous, healthy and natural one—they are in the way to be the New England of the Pacific coast. Just now, new and exciting discoveries

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

TUESDAY MORNING NOVEMBER 7, 1865

The President's Policy

To restore the functions of the Government in the late rebellious States is a matter of extreme delicacy The adoption of some general policy of reconstruction was necessary, and it was all important that at the beginning this policy should be wise and right As to the course which ought to have been taken it is well known that among the ablest men of the nation there has been and is still a divided opinion The radicals or the "impracticables" as their opponents call them could not have been followed implicitly without danger of great innovation upon some parts of our Constitution, but on the other hand it was by no means wise to utterly discard all their suggestions in the matter of restoring the Government In some respects the Presidential plan works well, but in others it comes very far short of what is desired Already collisions are occurring between State and Federal authority as in the case of South Carolina That State having elected a Governor who was known to have entertained a most rancorous hostility toward the Government, the President a few days ago directed Gov Perry to continue to exercise the duties of his office until he should be apprised of the further intentions of the Executive in the matter. In other words, a secessionist having been chosen Governor at an election ordered or permitted by the authorities, the election is to be declared null. Perhaps this course is rendered necessary by the extraordinary circumstances of the case, but we think it must appear to every one that it would have been better had no election whatever been held, until such time as the people should be willing to renounce disloyalty, and yield a willing obedience to the Government

The President having chosen to consider the rebellious States as never having withdrawn from the Union, it became necessary to follow out a line of policy which should be consistent, as far as possible with itself, and which should not interfere with the rights of the States as separate political communities. Hence as regards the suffrage question, considered from his stand point the President is clearly right. If Alabama and Texas are States in the Union—if by the criminal conduct of their citizens they have lost none of their former rights, then they have exclusive control of the suffrage question within their own jurisdiction, the same as have New York and Illinois This is the President's position He does not object to the enfranchisement of the blacks in any State which may see fit to give them the right of suffrage, but he does not recognize the right of the General Government to interfere at all in this or in any other matter which should be controlled solely by the States themselves

On his accession to the Presidency, Mr John son told the country that treason was a crime and must be punished with severity. Candor compels us to say that in his subsequent course he does not appear to have adhered to this opinion His method of dealing with rebels may be the very best for the country that could be devised, but we cannot help thinking that the bringing of some of the leaders of the insurrection to condign punishment would prove a salutary check upon the ambition of those whose ambitious lead them to be traitors, and who only wait their opportunity to light up the flames of civil war In addition to the need of deterrent examples, the law also should be vindicated Further than the military suppression of the rebellion, this has not yet been done in a single instance. By reason of the exercise of extreme leniency, treason is in danger of being thought no crime

The President's plan will soon have been fairly tested. The country will shortly know the result If the "experiment" proves a failure, the fact will very soon appear. We do not regard it yet as a success Should Congress convene we may reasonably look for the policy of reconstruction to be modified In some degree, so as to suit the exigencies which have arisen since the first adoption of the plan

MEXICO —The troubles which distract unhappy Mexico seem as far ever from clearing away As called by a powerful foreign foe, and worse still divided into hostile domestic factions, that country presents a spectacle of disorder and anarchy the like of which is now, fortunately, nowhere else to be witnessed. Had the people of Mexico been true to their foes, adhering to each other and to their Government instead of inviting foreign intervention in order that one faction might have it in their power to wreak revenge upon an other, no enemy from beyond the ocean could ever have gained a lodgment in their territory Had Mexico opposed France in 1863 as resolutely as she did the United States in 1847, the French would long since have been driven from that country But political differences made the people enemies to each other, and now it appears that one faction, for the sake of enjoying a triumph over its opponents, is quite willing that all, even including themselves, shall be enslaved.

Mexico reads to the world an instructive but melancholy lesson. In that country, government has never had any stability A statistician in forms us that since Mexico achieved her Independence, a little more than forty years ago, she has had no less than twenty seven new constitutions or modifications of old ones She has had popular leaders without number—Dictators, Presidents and victorious Generals An inconstant people the Mexicans have been continually exchanging our favorite for another. Elections among them have usually had no other result than to set the country in an uproar, and to bring upon the people the atrocities of a civil war, For years the defeated party in a general election has been accustomed to rebel To this conduct on the part of the people, the calamities that are now upon them are to be ascribed. The regular government has never been sufficiently powerful to suppress these frequent insurrections, and hence there has been no check whatever upon the turbulence of factious men The Mexicans are clearly incompetent to govern themselves Popular government with them has been a signal failure The attempt to carry it into operation has resulted only in evil Nothing can be more futile than the endeavor to give a people a better government than they are qualified to appreciate and enjoy A stable monarchy is always to be preferred to an instable popular government

The quarrels which keep Mexico in a continual turmoil seem to have their origin in caste alone The people consist of two great classes—the natives and Spaniards These races it is true have to a great extent, mixed and blended with each other but the amalgamation is not complete There has been no assimilation of the races with each other—no harmonious action between them All classes are too ignorant to perceive how to govern themselves or the country Were learning diffused among them—were they skilled in the affairs of government, there might be some hope that these bickerings would not last forever As it is their folly has brought upon them the loss of self government and has made or will soon make them the vassals of a despotic foreign power

CALIFORNIA WINE —In some parts of California the vintage of 1865 will be unusually small The grape crop of this year in some localities was not equal to the usual amount Brandy is said to pay better than wine and hence a considerable part of the grape crop is now used in its manufacture

SAN FRANCISCO November 6th 1865 The schr Milt a Belger Captain Harding arrived yesterday afternoon twelve days from Anadyr Bay, bringing nearly a month's later intelligence from the Russian Telegraph expedition The Milton Belger took up the exploring party commanded by Capt F M Ray and left Plover Bay, on the 21st of August She had left them with all outfit and prepared to pursue their explorations of the Anadyr river and thence across to Kolyuk sea during the coming winter They will remain under cover for the purpose which are thought as plenty in the country The party were all well when the Belger left Capt McRay's party were getting along He had put in three and spent a week in exploring the Anadyr river with the party He left the bay on the 14th of October for Petropaulski where he has to return to this city via Victoria and New Westminster arriving here about the first of December A letter from Col Buckley dated Anadyr Bay 6th 9th says all favorable and an exploration of both continents on shore with supplies The Gold Hunter with Col Hydes party which was last reported to have parted from the Wm Wright in a storm while being towed from Nelson's Fort St Michael arrived safely in Plover Bay on the 26th of September She landed the balance of Kennan's party at Fort St Michael where she left them all well and preparing for the winter explorations The country in Siberia is reported destitute of timber and very inhospitably adapted for the exploration proposed by the company

Thomas F Hayes a young man 21 years of age was shot in the breast and instantly killed by Michael Hynes on Third Plate yesterday The two parties lived in the same house and had frequently quarrelled Yesterday they met in the hall when the quarrel was renewed and Hayes was beaten and knocked down stairs He then went to his room and got a single barreled pistol with which he returned, when he met Hynes armed with a six shooter Hayes snapped his pistol at Hynes but missed fire Hynes then fired two shots killing Hayes instantly

Last evening, at Hayes Valley, a difficulty occurred between J P Goodman, Saloon keeper, and P George, agent of the Butiely Family in which the latter was stabbed in the side by the former the weapon used being a common pocket knife

William H Slocumb son of R W Slocumb, was thrown from his horse yesterday on Bush street His foot caught in the stirrup and the horse took fright and dragged him some distance until his head struck against a curbstone smashing in his skull and injuring him so that he died in a few hours afterward

A meeting of the Union League was held on Friday evening last when it was concluded to discontinue their regular meetings, the necessity for vigilance no longer existing

The old cases of the Ophir Silver Mining Company vs the Burning Moscow Silver Mining Company and vice versa which have been pending for several years and in which injunctions have been issued and removed as frequently that it becomes almost impossible to tell how matters stood have finally received their quietus through a compromise which will probably be effected to-morrow by signing sealing and delivering of the necessary documents The terms agreed to are substantially as follows The Ophir company surrenders to the Moscow company the 3721 shares of stock which they purchased to get the controlling interest, and gives the Moscow company besides a bonus of $7,500, in return for which the Moscow gives the Ophir the ground in dispute, comprising 800 feet of the Moscow lead on which the Ophir company have been working for some time past The Burning Moscow reserves 1 600 feet in all, being 900 feet on the north and 700 feet to the south of the ground ceded to the Ophir and also reserves its personal property, consisting of mill machinery etc Of the 900 feet on the north 300 feet is given to the Latrobe Tunnel Company for developing the mine—the tunnel striking the lead 400 feet below the surface The two companies have spent nearly $1,000 000 in fighting for this 800 feet of ground which the Ophir now secures for about $70,000, and which has a present market value of about $50 000

General McDowell orders the mustering out of the service the Nevada volunteers

The Trade movement continues moderate, and there is no material variation in the ruling of prices for the leading staples The arrival of the Jurisdictis from New York after an unusually quick passage for the season has served to replenish the supplies of some commodities which were running low

The pressure in financial circles continues, and the bulk of the loans now being put out are at one-half per cent Among the causes assigned for this stringency in the absence of speculation is backward payments from the interior and a withdrawal to some extent of foreign capital owing to the rise of the rates of interest in Europe

The ruling of the mining share market is rather sanguine According to all accounts there is no falling off in the yield of leading mines, and yet stock prices continue to recede At the morning board Belcher and Crown Point each declined $35 Savage $10 Potosi and Alpha, each $5 On the other hand Empire will advance $27 50 Ophir $10 There was a small sale of Legal Tender Notes at 69½

TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT AT OHIO The citizens of Scio says the Albany Democrat, having become disgusted with the presence of a whisky dead fall at that place, went last week and bought the dealer's stock of beverages and gave them to the earth to drink A merchant also in another part of the town rolled out his cask of spirits and watered the streets with its contents If the Democracy of Scio remain under until next June, we shall have a handsome Union majority in that place

SUPPRESSED PAPERS —The Richmond Whig, Richmond Bulletin, Petersburg News and one or two other papers, have been suppressed by the military within the last few months This course on the part of the authorities we regard as a serious error A half dead newspaper is suppressed its publication ceases for a while but it soon resumes with a greatly increased subscription list The paper is advertised by might into notice and assumes a new life and importance This sort of thing has often occurred

WHEAT SOWING We learn that the farmers of the valley have lately improved the opportunity to sow a considerable amount of wheat The rains a few weeks ago put the ground in fine order for plowing and the fair weather that has since prevailed has afforded an unusually good opportunity for putting in grain The best native farmer in the valley who keeps his work moving and completes it in good time will easily make money in Oregon

LINN COUNTY FAIR GROUNDS —The Linn County Agricultural Society have decided to purchase two hundred and forty acres of land one mile south of Albany for a fair ground The cost will be $3 000 The money for making the purchase has already been raised The grounds are to be improved to go fully into effect another year

The Albany Democrat says that Dr Ballard State Senator for Linn County, is now probably on his way home and may reach the State in time to occupy his seat during the extra session Mr Hovey of Bristol is also temporarily absent, though we have not learned whether he will return in time to resume his seat next month

General Rosecrans has left California for the East His friends say he will return to this coast and make it his future home

The Fenians are said to number 40 000 in Ireland and 200,000 in America

PERSONAL —We had the pleasure last evening of a call from Governor Pickering of Washington Territory The Governor has been absent at Washington since January last He will start this morning for Olympia by way of Victoria

[illegible] District Court — November term, Monday 9th, 1865. Deady Justice. Grand Jury [illegible] 15 persons present. Jacob Conner appointed

[illegible] the jury specially in regard to the [illegible] section of the Internal Revenue Act [illegible] the punishment of persons who engage in [illegible] certain trades, professions &c., without [illegible] part of the charge was in writing and is as [illegible]

[illegible] of the Grand Jury — Having spoken to you generally, I deem it proper on this occasion [illegible] attention to provisions of the Internal Revenue [illegible] a certain class persons to take out [illegible] engaging in the business therein specified. [illegible] section of the Act specially prohibits the [illegible] or way of the enumerated trades [illegible] License to obtained thereof [illegible]

[illegible] makes it the duty of the person required [illegible] to register with the Assistant Assessor [illegible] District in which he designs to carry on the [illegible] his name, the kind of trade or profession [illegible] is desired, and the place where he [illegible] in such trade or profession. These facts [illegible] the Assessor and Collector of the district, [illegible] on paying the proper amount to the [illegible] or his deputy, is entitled to receive the license [illegible]

[illegible] section of the Act provides for the punishment [illegible] without a license. The acts made punishable [illegible] are exercising or carrying on any [illegible] proof [illegible] enumerated in the Act [illegible] a license therefor [illegible] to carry on, signified by [illegible] to engage in such [illegible] which is the violation of this section it is [illegible] for the proof to show the commission [illegible] sale or transactions as the selling of a glass of [illegible] prescribing for a particular patient the [illegible] or prosecuting or defending a party [illegible] is enough if the proof shows that the [illegible] pursued by advertisement signs [illegible] and the ordinary outfit or furniture [illegible] the particular trade, business or profession [illegible] sent to the world in that capacity, [illegible] and invited custom or business. The [illegible] are not excluded of course and on the most satisfactory. But the proof [illegible] able to show an exercise or use [illegible] trade, profession or profession [illegible] form will not more particularly define [illegible] as it deems sufficient for the [illegible] inquiry. Doubtless, particular cases [illegible] the trial of which, special directions or [illegible] the law may be necessary [illegible] duty to make thorough investigation of the [illegible] the statute, and prosecute the offenders [illegible] trial. Other taxes are levied upon property [illegible] by the persons officers from the [illegible] license tax is— [illegible] the person [illegible] by a punishment of the persons [illegible] is made it. When the honest and diligent [illegible] the means for the support of Government, [illegible] upon him to allow the dishonest and negligent [illegible] the payment of their just share. It will [illegible] such a practice is tolerated until the honest [illegible] will begin to ask the question, why [illegible] pay taxes like a good citizen? Here is my [illegible] and neighbor, who pays nothing and [illegible] and unmolested. The result would [illegible] that every one would practice to repudiate and [illegible] of their public dues, and so would [illegible] and anarchy. You may call before [illegible] for the district, and ascertain who have [illegible] tax. The [illegible] is for one year from [illegible] the May following. A license may be [illegible] those during the year, until the first of [illegible] But a license does not operate retrospective [illegible] a person in the pursuit of any [illegible] from the time it is taken out [illegible] not intended that a person shall carry [illegible] for the whole or any part of the year and [illegible] to prove the past or not as the [illegible] or conducive to his own interest [illegible] may upon that in some instances you [illegible] engaged in trades or professions [illegible] have been so engaged a few days after [illegible] of the old license and before taking out [illegible] of the new one. Strictly speaking such person [illegible] be punished. But where you are satisfied [illegible] acted in good faith, not dishonestly [illegible] and the delay arose from some unavoidable [illegible] oversight, I would advise you not [illegible] any advice, because I have no [illegible] A person not to find an indictment where the [illegible] one, and you are authorized to [illegible] such cases. The statute in this case takes no [illegible] but [illegible] the fact of being on [illegible] trades or professions for [illegible] short, without having [illegible]

[illegible] is the duty of the party to obtain [illegible] information, to enable [illegible] 216, and then to go or send [illegible] The [illegible] officers may, as a matter [illegible] ging the revenue, visit the party [illegible] and offer the [illegible] but the party [illegible] examination and the lack [illegible] from the violation of this [illegible] of every person to obtain the license [illegible] to engage in any of the enumerated [illegible] or profession without a license, for [illegible] tion, is a violation of the statute [illegible] were carried, and an order for four informations [illegible] Henry Miller, for smuggling. Defendant [illegible] was fined $50 and costs... C H Lee [illegible] to the bar, on motion of A Holbrook [illegible] and L. H. Roby were appointed bailiffs, two [illegible] of arrobas [illegible] John Dalton [illegible] ship and Sawyer to Information. Defendant [illegible] not speedily, confined, until Thursday morning to file recorded [illegible] E. W. Jacob Meyer — indictment for perjury [illegible] o'clock Tuesday the 7th. Gov Marvin to the People of Florida.—We make the following extracts from the speech of Gov. Marvin to the people of Florida, delivered at Quincy, in September

I feel it a duty I owe to you and to our common country to call your attention to a few matters which must characterize the constitution to be framed. Every element which entered into the war seemed concentrated on the destruction of slavery. It was without constitutional basis or legal protection when your State government was destroyed; it has been extinguished by military orders and by Presidential proclamations and may be considered as thrice dead and plucked up by the roots. Any attempt on the part of the convention to revive and reinstate it would be labor and time spent in vain. The future constitution of Florida must guarantee freedom alike to all. It must not be black or white but free.

All citizens before the law, the freedmen must be on all respects our equals. I do not mean that as a race they are or can be made during many generations, if ever the equals personally of the Caucasian race, or can occupy the same political or social position, but that is no reason why constitution or law should discriminate against them. The right of suffrage does not necessarily follow for that is not a natural but a political right, which may be granted or withheld, as sound policy may dictate.

Furthermore, the Constitution must declare that persons of color shall be admitted as witnesses in all our courts of civil jurisprudence. The law, in this respect must know no distinction of color.

Our loyalty may not be the most ardent and proud at the present time. Our property lies ruined and scattered in the wide sweeping and bloody paths of war. But the ruin wrought is not the only aspect of the case that should be considered. The suffering has not all fallen to our lot. The sacred remains of two hundred thousand Northmen lie buried in Southern graves! The sacrificing heroism of your Northern brothers which has challenged the admiration and wonder of the world, touches the chivalrous feelings of the South, and teaches us that we were conquered, not by cowards or cowards, but by foemen worthy of our steel.

A "Sudden Divine Rebuked.—Quite a sensation was produced in St Mark's Episcopal Church, in Philadelphia on Sunday, October 1st, by the appearance of Rev Dr Wilmer in the church. Dr Wilmer was the pastor of the church before the war broke out, and his "secesh" proclivities induced him to leave and go South with a large amount of baggage, which was retained at Fortress Monroe by the Government. The Doctor appeared in the chancel to assist in celebrating the Holy Communion service, and this was the signal for a large portion of the congregation to leave the church in disgust.

Orchards and Gardens.—The season of the year has arrived when attention should be given to the pruning of orchards, trees, vines and plants. When the leaves drop, the plant begins to sleep the sap is descending and the wound heals easily, and no injury is done to the tree or plant—now is the time to begin to prune.

Garden work should now be attended to, good rich manure should be dug in deep, the soil made rich and fine and well raked, plants, vines and shrubs carefully pruned to shape.

Corn Beer.—Boil a gallon of shelled corn in ten gallons of water until the grains burst. To this liquor, when strained off in a cask, put half an ounce of bruised ginger root, half an ounce of cream tartar, and half a gallon of molasses and a teacup of yeast. When the beer ferments it is ready for use, and will soar in a few days.

The Amendment to the Constitution of Connecticut, intended to give the blacks the elective franchise was lost by about 5,000 votes. It was not made a party measure.

It is then many persons doubt the truth so often asserted that one dose of Hall's Pulmonary Balsam will cure a cold. One table spoonful taken at bed time, will surely cure any cold in the head chest or throat, it is sold by all druggists at fifty cents a bottle.

Mrs S A Allen's World's Hair Restorer and Dressing. You cannot be bald or grey and neither time nor sickness can blemish your Hair, if you use them. Sold by all Druggists. Agents, Hostetter Smith & Dean, San Francisco.

The Approaching Trial of Davis—American Feeling toward Him.

The New York correspondent of the London Times writes as follows

As the time of Davis's trial draws nearer, the more I see with it, fit in its result increases. It was thought that by postponing the event public opinion in the North would soften toward Davis, but there is no indication of such a change, on the contrary, circumstances are always occurring which strengthen the general desire to see the heaviest of punishment fall upon his head. Nothing will satisfy a very large portion of the people but Davis's life. Even the most moderate men express a feeling of anxiety lest the Government should be contented with his banishment. The eager craving for vengeance on an individual notwithstanding the awful visitation which has fallen upon the entire South, and which might seem enough to appease the demands of the most vindictive, may appear very reprehensible to people in England but it is not so unreasonable as it looks at a distance. Not only can it be explained but justified, it does not arise from any party passion, but from the remembrance of deeds which are more horrible than the English public can have any idea of, and it is constantly fed by new proofs of barbarity perpetrated upon Federal prisoners. If there is any bitterness entertained by Northern people toward the South—and very rarely indeed have I seen evidence of it—it springs from the same cause which makes them talk of Davis as of being scarcely human. That cause is the inexcusable and infamous treatment which the Northern captured soldiers received in South Carolina.

The evidence upon which the charges of cruelty rest is overwhelming and unanswerable. A Sanitary Commission was appointed by the Government to inquire into the circumstances, and the members of it examined a great many men who had been prisoners in the South, some of whom were at death's door when they told their story. The testimony has been published by official sanction, and photographs of a few of the prisoners are prefixed to the narrative. Photographs do not lie, and these pictures of living skeletons, covered with horrible sores and wounds, speak for themselves. But still more painful witnesses against the prisons of the South are to be met with in almost every village in the presence of poor fellows who have returned in a state of idiocy, or paralyzed, or eaten up with scurvy. A wretched object was pointed out to me the other day. There were still the traces of a robust and strong man about him, but he was physically a wreck, and his mind was utterly gone. When it is considered that at Andersonville the Confederates put the Northern prisoners on a piece of land without even a tent to cover them, that a tropical sun beat down upon their heads, and that they had not food enough given them to keep a dog alive, it cannot cause surprise that mind and body alike broke down. It is a fact and an awful one to realize, that around that prison field of Andersonville, 15,000 Northern soldiers, taken captive, lie buried. Fever and starvation laid them low. In the regular prisons, where at least shelter from heat and cold was provided, the men were huddled together so that it was almost impossible to breathe in the rooms. When they went to the windows to get a little fresh air they were shot down from the outside by the sentinels. This crime is proved to have been committed in scores of cases. The evidence, as I have said, is before the world; the Southern leaders do not attempt to contradict it. They only say they did as well as they could, and all one's wishes and hopes would lead one to believe them. But here, again, unfortunately, the evidence is too strong in disproof of their words. At Libby, close to Davis's house, the prisoners were literally starving. Their friends in the North heard of this and sent them boxes of provisions. These boxes were stored in sheds directly in front of the prison, so that the men could see them from their windows, but the authorities refused to distribute them. The prisoners died from hunger in the sight of plenty. The Southern defence is that this was a retaliatory measure, used because there had been a complaint about the treatment of Southern men in the North. But it is proved beyond all doubt—and every Confederate soldier, private or officer, who is questioned on the subject admits it—that in the Northern prisons no distinction whatever was made between Federal and Confederate; both were carefully looked after and always had proper clothing and food.

"It is very easy for you Englishmen to talk about mercy and forgiveness," said a lady talking of this subject, "but how would you have felt toward the Russians if they had starved and murdered 15,000 of your soldiers in one prison?" It is this feeling which extends through every class of society in the North. To condemn it without weighing the circumstances which produce it, is to do less than justice to a people who are ready to shake hands with every Southern man and to help him with money, provided he was not a leader among them. As a body, the Northern people are impatient to be friends with the South. It is only against the leaders that they bear animosity, and it is chiefly concentrated upon the head of Davis for he lived within a stone's throw of Libby Prison, whence the corpses of starved men were daily carried out in large numbers. It may be asked, "Did Davis and Gen. Lee know of the manner in which Northern prisoners were treated?" The North believe they did, and therefore, as I have said, the cry for their lives, however repulsive it may sound, is not a cry raised without provocation. It is not the clamor of a mob, and is so deep and general that I believe the Government will have to resist the whole force of public opinion, if Davis is to save his life. "If," says a writer who truly reflects the views of the people on this subject, "Gen. Lee had determined not to have prisoners starved or abused, does any one doubt that he could have prevented these things?" "Nobody doubts it. And so of Davis—the chief of a so called Confederacy, who could calmly consider among his official documents incendiary plots for the destruction of ships, hotels and cities full of people, is a chief well worthy to preside over such cruelties; but his only just title is President of Assassins, and the whole civilized world should make common cause against such a miscreant." I do not know whether this argument and this language will be deemed conclusive or satisfactory in England; they are certainly held to be so here, and after all, it is in America that Davis is to be tried. His fate might see a worse fate before him than his death in Fortress Monroe.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Last Tuesday evening, Thomas Boggs, one of the oldest residents of this county, died suddenly at his house, about six miles from town. He had come in town on Monday and procured 120 grains of opium—asking at the time for directions as to the quantity to be taken. His wife says that he took an opium pill that evening shortly after his return home, a second one about midnight, and the third and last early Tuesday morning. That morning he attended to his ordinary duties about the farm and house, and at two o'clock, afternoon, signed a paper concerning some school business in the neighborhood. Shortly after that he became stupid, then insensible, and died that evening. A post mortem examination on Wednesday, at which Drs. Rice, Tate and Alexander were present, elicited the fact that the deceased must have taken from 40 to 60 grains of opium, which produced his death. The body presented a sound, healthy appearance, and was free from any evidences of immediate disease. Mr. Boggs had lately manifested a slight aberration of mind, consequent upon business and other troubles, but whether he took the opium to sooth his mind, through the temporary stupefaction, or with fatal intent, can never, perhaps, be known. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church of this town, and last Sunday attended at the communion ceremony. His age was about forty five years, and he has left a wife and several small children. His remains were conveyed to their last resting place on Thursday.—Albany Democrat

CARD BY THE DEATH OF HIS SON

Thanks to the g'ds! my boy has done his duty
We come my son. There set him down my friends
Full in my sight that I may view at leisure
The manly corpse and count them glorious wounds
How beautiful is death when earned by virtue
Who would not be that youth? What pity is
That we are doom'd to weep come to our country
Why sits this sadness on your brows, my friends?
I should have blushed if Cato's house had stood
Secure, and fondled in a civil war.

AT HOME.—The Colfax party left San Francisco September 2d for their home in the West. The Chicago Tribune of September 27th has the following account of the arrival of one of the party

The friends of Lieutenant Governor Bross will be glad to learn of his safe return from his extended trip in Colfax's party through the great interior of the Continent and on the Pacific coast. He reached this city yesterday noon, in the best health and spirits after such experiences of wayfaring as few tourists have enjoyed.

The accounts of postmasters in the States recently under rebel dominion are now undergoing a strict examination by the Postmaster General, for the purpose of instituting suits against those found to be indebted to the United States.

A St. Louis burglar who was robbing a room in which a young lady was sleeping could not resist the temptation of kissing the beautiful lips of the damsel and was caught at it. It will be State Prison for a kiss.

General Buell is President of a company which has leased R. A. Alexander's extensive iron works on Green river, in Kentucky.

RAISING CATTLE.—A correspondent of the Baltimore Telegraph, thus describes his method of raising calves: "A calf that I am going to raise I never let suck the cow. It is much easier to learn it to drink with or than after sucking. I have had calves drink at milk before they were twelve hours old, and after the second day have fed it to ride with them, as they drink freely in a pail of milk. Besides the great advantage of this is, that when they are raised with the cows they never learn to drink, neither have to coax them to prevent their sucking, as I know nothing about it. For the first two weeks I gave them milk drawn from the mother rather than two cows then I scald a little bran or ground oats and corn and mix it in. One measure I have about milk warm, feeding three times a day, making fresh each time, as they do not relish stale food. They will soon eat a little hay clover or best. If there is grass I turn them out for a short time, and as soon as the days may be left run, and then I gradually let feed off. I consider March the best time to start calves as in April they can get a little grass, and by the following winter they have a good beginning."

HOW TO BAKE BREAD.—The housewife who would bake her bread in the best way will not set it on hard crust, can do so very readily. Just before placing her bread in the oven, she has only to rub its surface with butter or lard. This will close the pores, preventing the escape of the gas which is produced by the yeast, and the escape of the steam which is produced by the moisture of the heated loaf. Bread thus baked will be almost crustless. Indeed so long as the moisture is confined it will be difficult to burn the loaf to any great depth. The large vacancies in the bread will be less numerous, though, as a whole it will be more porous, and therefore lighter. Yeast bread, when two or three days old, becomes crumbly and in appearance, though not necessarily in fact, dryer than when it was first baked. This apparent dryness arises not from a loss of moisture, but from a chemical change in the arrangement of the bread molecules. Put the bread into an oven, heated to a point slightly below boiling water, so that the moisture of the bread may not be turned into steam and escape, and its original softness will at once be restored.

TO ASK FOR.—Procure a large sponge wash it well and press dry, which will have the cells quite open then sprinkle over it some fine white sugar, and place it where the ants are troublesome. They will soon collect on the sponge, and take up their abode in the cells. It is only necessary to dip the sponge in scalding water, which will wash them out dead by tens of thousands. Put on more sugar, and set the trap for a new haul. This process will soon clear the house of every ant.

Mr. Johnston, of New York, the wisest of our farmers, says he has used manure as top dressing for twenty years, and is convinced that one load used in that way, is worth more than two loads plowed under.

Gen. Burnside who, at the opening of the war was a Breckinridge Democrat, in a late stirring speech in Philadelphia upon the happy return of peace said

I think the only thing to do now is for us to make our neighbors of the South and every one else to feel that we ought to grant to every freeman on this continent the right to help rule the land. And while we grant this, let us ask Almighty God, who has created us here, to influence all those who may have the right to vote to vote on the right side.

Vallandingham made a speech at Bucyrus, Ohio, lately devoted to the negro. A dispatch concerning it to the Cincinnati Gazette, says: "At the conclusion of his argument, he opened before the crowd a scroll with a horrible caricature, which he represented as a fair specimen of the negro after generations of education. The crowd paid the tribute of a shout to the exhibition of statesmanship."

A NEAT DEFINITION.—Miss Walling, a Texan, who with her three children escaped from the State through innumerable perils, had a very clear conception of some historical facts. In a late description of her sufferings she casually remarked: "I look upon a rebel as a courageous Copperhead, but I look upon a Copperhead as a cowardly rebel."—Harper's Weekly

"CONSTITUTION WATER,"

THE ONLY REMEDY FOR DISEASES OF THE

BLADDER, KIDNEYS,

Gravel, Dropsical Swellings,

GENITAL DEBILITY, ETC.

THE ASTONISHING SUCCESS WHICH HAS ATtended this invaluable medicine in cases of the most valuable and complicated character, which had baffled the skill of all other physicians, is almost miraculous. An adequate idea of the latent disease almost miraculous change, which it causes in the debilitated constitution and system. In fact it is universally acknowledged as a remedy for the permanent cure of the maladies above mentioned, and also

DIABETES, IMPOTENCY,
LOSS OF MUSCULAR ENERGY,
PHYSICAL PROSTRATION,
INDIGESTION,
SEMINAL WEAKNESS,
GLEET, BLOOD ALBUMEN,

And in every disease only connected with the disorder or decay of the PROCREATIVE FUNCTIONS. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness, should take the

CONSTITUTION WATER,

Whether broken down by excess, weak by nature or impaired by accident, the unsettling and diseased organization is at once called to action and built up. With many this celebrated medicine has called the

MEDICAL WONDER.

The stooping, trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man, the shuffle ceases, the nervous with a firm step, his mind, which was previously unable to grasp an idea of an almost idiotic apathy, becomes intelligent and active, and he goes forth in every respect a perfect specimen of manhood. The medicine reaches the CONSTITUTION itself, and restores it to its normal condition.

IRRITATION OF THE NECK OF THE BLADDER, INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, AND CATARRH OF THE BLADDER, STRANGURY AND BURNING, OR PAINFUL URINATION, GRAVEL, BRICK DUST DEPOSITS AND MUCOUS OR MILKY DISCHARGES AFTER URINATING.

For these diseases it is truly a sovereign remedy and too much cannot be said in its praises. A single dose has been known to relieve the most urgent symptoms. TRY IT in these cases, and you will never give praise to
